Audubon Canyon Ranch was founded in 1962 to protect an important heronry on the Marin County coast north of San Francisco and to prevent intensive commercial development of the undisturbed area surrounding the colony. Now, Audubon Canyon Ranch manages a system of wildlife sanctuaries in Marin and Sonoma counties and conducts regional programs in conservation research, habitat protection and restoration, and nature education.

The San Francisco Bay Bird Observatory (<http://www.sfbbo.org>), a collaborator on this project, is dedicated to the conservation of birds and their habitats through science and outreach, and to contributing to informed resource management decisions in the San Francisco Bay Area.

Roger Hothem (U.S. Geological Survey) and the Golden Gate National Recreation Area provided unpublished data for Alcatraz Island. Grant Fletcher, Keith Fraser, David Greene, Kirk Hastings, and Don Tiernan provided or operated observation boats. Bruce Moorad provided aerial reconnaissance. Diane Hichwa and Robin Leong and provided valuable assistance in coordinating field observers. Susan Kelly and Sarah Tappen assisted with database management and project coordination. We thank Joseph Kinyon (National Park Service Pacific Learning Center) for assistance with mapping and GIS. Emiko Condeso provided valuable comments on the draft manuscript, assisted in generating maps, and helped produce the final version of the atlas. Numerous land owners and public agencies generously provided access to heronries. The Loch Lomond Marina in San Rafael provided boat launching access for monitoring the Marin Islands. Financial support was provided by the Dennis and Carol Ann Rockey Fund of the Marin Community Foundation and the Robert J. & Helen H. Glaser Family Foundation. This project is part of ongoing efforts by Audubon Canyon Ranch and the San Francisco Bay Bird Observatory to monitor heronries in the San Francisco Bay area.
